The view from Southan Road towards the church and trees along the canal provide part of the aesthetic of Radford Semole. Whilst the fields both side of Church Lane are working fields, they provide a focal point of the village similar to a village green. Any development on Site 1 would destroy the focal point of the village.

Radford Semole's other appeal is that it is physically separate from Leerington and therefore Site 4 is not suitable for additional housing.

Sites 2 and 3 are the least objectionable of the proposed sites. I see no reason for all the new development to be lumped together on one site - two or more sites would be more acceptable.

Furthermore, developments towards Southan would allow the installation of new services (water, sewerage, gas and electricity) which could support further growth of the area in later years and solve potential traffic problems.

The requirement of a "balancing pond" in the proposal for Site 1, would indicate drainage problems with the site.
