Sir,

I am writing to endorse the points made by my neighbour Eric Kerwan, [REDACTED]. In addition to his very relevant comments about the contradictory nature of the way the development of the planning process is proceeding I would I would add a purely personal comment This concerns the residential amenity provided by our rose bed borders. Since their construction these borders have been tended by the householders ,new roses bought as necessary, with all such labour and expense carried by themselves. In my own case this has been over almost 60 years. These borders greatly improve safety and convenience for children and older pedestrians Further, as your original proposals implicitly accept you cannot possibly consider widening the road .

Yours faithfully,

K L Gray
